As the Crow Flies Priya Raghubir,2015 Consumers make distance judgments when they decide which store to visit or which route to take However these judgments may be prone to various spatial perception biases While there is a rich literature on spatial perceptions in urban planning and environmental and cognitive psychology there is little in the field of consumer behavior In this article we introduce the topic of spatial perceptions as an area of research in marketing We extend the literature on spatial perceptions by proposing that consumers use the direct distance between the endpoints of a path or the distance as the crow flies as a source of information while making distance judgments the shorter the direct distance the shorter the distance estimate We study two spatial features that affect direct distance path angularity i e the size of the angle between path segments and path direction i e whether the path retraces back or not We further propose and demonstrate that the direct distance bias is due to the perceptual salience of direct distance and is used by consumers in an automatic manner Theoretical implications for the manner in which consumers process spatial information and the use of cognitive heuristics while making spatial judgments are discussed

The Novel Map Patrick M. Bray, 2013-01-31 Focusing on Stendhal G rard de Nerval George Sand mile Zola and Marcel Proust The Novel Map Mapping the Self in Nineteenth Century French Fiction explores the ways that these writers represent and negotiate the relationship between the self and the world as a function of space in a novel turned map With the rise of the novel and of autobiography the literary and cultural contexts of nineteenth century France reconfigured both the ways literature could represent subjects and the ways subjects related to space In the first person works of these authors maps situate the narrator within the imaginary space of the novel Yet the time inherent in the text's narrative unsettles the spatial self drawn by the maps and so creates a novel self one which is both new and literary The novel self transcends the rigid confines of a map In this significant study Patrick M Bray charts a new direction in critical theory
